NUMBER 40

PARAGRAPHS CONCERNING MICHIGAN

(By Ed. A. Nowack.)

Lansing, Mich., October 9.—The average date of the last killing frost in spring in upper Michigan is given as June 8—while the average date of the first killing frost is given as August 26. These dates apply to the weather bureau station at Humboldt, in the upper peninsula. In the lower peninsula the bureau readings at Kalamazoo give the average date of the last killing frost as of April 30 and the first killing frost in fall as of October 19. The average number of growing days in the upper peninsula region covered by the Humboldt station is placed at 79 while for the Kalamazoo station it is 172 days.

As a stimulus to increasing tourist traffic in Michigan the 1925 legislature will be asked to make an appropriation of $100,000 which is to be matched, dollar for dollar, by the three tourist bureaus in the state. With this fund of $200,000 a national advertising campaign is to be conducted, in which Michigan's "last frontier," the great northland, and the state's remarkable hunting and fishing and other recreational resources, will be generously placed before the public.

That queer class of folk in Michigan—known as the rags, bones, and old iron men—reaped a harvest last year that ran into millions, according to the figures just given out by the U. S. Department of the Interior. Secondary old metals collected by these men—which means copper, lead, zinc, antimony, aluminum, and nickel, together with brass and other alloys—amounted to about 180,000 tons, and had a value of more than $40,000,000. The old copper kettles, and zinc washboards, and other things that go to the dump are rescued by these queer folk and sold. Last year's business showed a large increase over 1922.

A mere man—whose name it is not safe to mention—has compiled a set of statistics to show that out of every 20 girls in the state's employ a combined loss of three hours daily results because of the close attention paid to the toilet. But before bobbed hair came in this lost time was more than doubled.

Did you know that: The combined beet sugar industry of the state of Michigan represents a capital investment of $22,000,000 and that sugar beet seed was imported from Europe and distributed to farmers in this state after the U. S. Weather Bureau determined our climate was good for production of that crop.

The growth of mint in Michigan on the muck lands of the southwestern part of the state is quite as old as the state itself. Mint also will grow well and produce a large oil yield in the Lake Superior region. The greater portion of the mint raised in this country is produced here.

A very excellent celery is produced on a small scale near Newberry. A movement is on foot in Michigan sporting circles to substitute a barless hook for fishermen and that the greatest protest comes from the makers of these hooks who claim they have millions on hand and would suffer a great financial loss.

A. T. Stewart, superintendent of Michigan Fisheries, claims that 75 per cent of hooked fish die. He believes a lower mortality would result if fishermen used barbless hooks.

The state can be compelled to dispose of land that has reverted to the commonwealth for nonpayment of taxes.

There are sixteen counties in the Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau, who pool their interests for better agricultural progress. The Western Michigan Development Bureau had 20 counties in its organization but its work is practically done by the Resort Bureau of the same name.

THE TEACHERS RECEPTION

The reception given in honor of the teachers at the school gymnasium last week Friday evening was a very pleasant event, as usual. The ladies of the Good Fellowship and the Women's clubs and the school board were the hosts and hostesses.

In the receiving line, besides the teachers were Supt. B. E. Smith and members of the board and Mrs. Burnham. After the formalities of introductions were ended the guests were favored by vocal solos by Mrs. Roy Milnes and Miss LaSalle, each responding to the deserved applause with encores.

The inspiring music by Schram's orchestra and the fine floor made dancing inviting and most everyone indulged in that pleasant pastime. Doughnuts and hot coffee added to the pleasantness of the evening.

The ladies committee had made the gymnasium pleasant with autumn leaves of the multitude of colors that are now so abundant. Cozy chairs and small tables covered with white lunch cloths where the guests enjoyed their refreshments were scattered about the room.

It was a very pleasant affair throughout.

U. S. FARM BANK AID SUCCESSFUL

Failures in Northwest Checked By Government Loans.

Washington—The agricultural credit corporation, organized last February on the initiative of President Coolidge as a method of relieving agricultural distress in the northwest, has been so successful in improving the banking situation in that territory that it has broadened its activities to include aid in farm diversification, according to a letter from C. T. Jaffray, chairman of the corporation board, to Secretary Mellon.

To date the corporation has assisted 230 banks with loans aggregating more than $5,000,000. Mr. Jaffray informed the secretary that deposits in these institutions amounted to approximately $53,000,000, and he believed it safe to assume that by the aid thus extended the number of bank failures in the northwest had been checked and at least $25,000,000 of depositors' money had been safeguarded.

Next year probably will see state park attendants in uniform and their authority extended to include that of deputy sheriffs. They now have the authority of game wardens.

COUNTRY GIRL IN NEW YORK CITY

TELLS OF EXPERIENCE OF FIRST VISIT TO BIG CITY.

Miss Elizabeth Cooper, an everyday reporter on a country weekly newspaper from this part of Michigan, tells an interesting story of her experience when, for the first time, she went to New York City. It is so human that we are glad to pass it along to our readers. She tells the following:

New York is probably a state of mind. Before you go there all you can think about are the reasons why you should start as soon as possible. And after you have been there more than a week, your mind is filled with more practical ideas on why you never should have come at all. That was my experience, and probably thousands of others could say the same.

Today I am especially full of reasons why young men and women should never come to New York. An evening's entertainment (I am told) consists of dinner at a cabaret at $2 each and a $1 tip. Then comes the theatre, with seats at $3 to $9, depending on the show. And of course one takes a taxi home (at 40 cents a mile). If the evening is to be well rounded out, there might be dancing after the theatre at one of the so-called "supper clubs," where you take a taxi home and your pocketbook will decide on an expenditure from $10 to $50. Now I ask you. Where does the young man earning $35 a week come in? The answer appears to be—he just doesn't.

I am especially sympathetic today because last night I was called upon to furnish food and a movie for two girls from home. We had an Italian dinner at a surprisingly dingy but popular restaurant in West 44th St. After that we strolled along the brighter part of Broadway and dropped into a movie. I know my friends think the entertainment was very meagre, and yet today I am mourning the lack of exactly $10—and all we did was eat and see a moving picture. I shall have to breakfast on "coffee and till pay day, and you can be very sure the next time a person asks me to a movie, I will know that seats cost $1.25 and shall be very careful to express my appreciation. Thus do we learn by experience.

It seems that yesterday that I walked out of Grand Central station with plans galore. I knew just how I would spend the first day, just what I wanted to see first, and just how I would go about it. First there was a ride on top of a Fifth Avenue bus. The wonderful windows and the throngs of leisurely shoppers were like fairyland to me. Certainly my simple clothes and humble thoughts were no part of such a world. Next came a subway ride. This was not so pleasant, for I could hardly stand the terrible noise and bad air. Imagine going from 42nd Street to 96th street in ten minutes. That is too much for a country girl, and I was more than glad to return by a street car, even though it took over half an hour. Next it was time to hunt up an automatic restaurant, where one peeks into post office box affairs to see what kind of food there is, and then drops the proper number of nickels in slot to open the door. They offer every kind of food from hot roast beef to ice cream, with the hot things piping hot and cold things really cold. The greatest trouble was in knowing which slot to put the money in. There were no instructions, and by having back and watching others, I soon managed to work even the coffee slot, where a nickel brings coffee from one spout and cream from another.

Late that afternoon my better judgment compelled me to look for a place to sleep. And I was fortunate in finding a tiny room in a cheap but respectable lodging house on a forlorn side street. I have spent many home-sick hours wondering how far it is to the nearest tree, but there are compensations too. By leaning out of my window as far as possible, I can see the lights on the Astor Hotel Roof-garden, two blocks away; and in the opposite direction I can get a glimpse of the Hudson River and Jersey shore. Also, the Leviathan docks at the foot of our street, and when she is in port a ten minute walk to the waterfront is well worth while.

So even though it is a squalid neighborhood, I let my imagination furnish the minor refinements, and try to absorb all of the "atmosphere" possible. My fellow lodgers included two Metropolitan singers, a composer of jazz whom you would all know, by name, a young doctor who is apparently "waiting for success," and a miscellaneous collection of girls who do rather odd and interesting things for a living.

Finding a job was the most heart-breaking experience of all, for these New Yorkers are dead set against taking in newcomers. (Perhaps they are afraid we will find out what bores they sometimes are.) But at last I managed to get work that seemed suitable, and now it begins to look like a real opportunity. Only time will tell, but I am glad of the chance to show what I can do.

During the summer it was too hot for much sightseeing, so I spent my spare time as a "first reader" of manuscripts for one of the big magazines. It was surprising to see what tons of written matter are submitted and it was my job to look over every article and eliminate the most promising material, which was passed on to a "second reader" who finally reached the editor for reading was then greatly condensed and more nearly in the class which he could use. What the editor liked he sent the Editor in Chief with a note, "I recom-

SCHOOL NOTES.

Sports and Athletics.
Miss Turcott's school gymnasium classes have organized two base ball teams. The captains of the seventh hour classes are Cora King and Bernice Corwin. The captains of the eighth hour classes are Erma Schjold and Gertrude Loskos. Some very interesting games have been played.

Burnham's foot ball eleven have been working hard in the last week so as to get in good shape for their next game. We wish you lots of luck, boys.

Jokes.

We wonder:
Why some pupils looked rather blue Wednesday night after school. (Report cards.)

Why it takes so long to put up the baskets in the gym. (Ask some of the seniors.)

Why the American history class has to read eight hundred pages of extra work.

Why Donald Reynolds has been present at school lately in the afternoon.

Why Miss Fox was so anxious to find her glasses the night of the week.

Why people are afraid to let Azilda LaGrove ride in their cars. (Too many wrecks.)

Where the Glee club gets its pep.

Miss Harris: What happened in 1854?

Guppy Matson: I don't know.

Miss Harris: Well, where do you go to find dates?

Guppy: To the telephone.

Edgar Douglas: I've lived on fruit for two weeks.

Lillian Ziebell: That's nothing, I've lived on Earth for seventeen years.

Mr. Smith: Why are you late to school young man?

Billy Johnson: Because of the sign I have to pass on my way here.

Mr. Smith: Well, what has that to do with it?

Billy: Well, it says, School ahead, Go Slow.

Mr. Burnham: You'll have to stay after school and work on your geography. You didn't locate a single one of those cities.

George Schroeder: I can't locate them, but I know how to tune in on the whole blame lot.

Miss Sharp: What's etiquette?

York Edmunds: It's saying "no thank you" when you want to holler "Gimme."

Wayne Eaglet was taken by his mother to see the doctor.

"Now, young man," said the doctor, "what is the matter with you?"

W. E.: It's like this, doctor, you know how you feel, when you don't know how you feel, well that's the way I feel now.

Astrid Ahman: Say, Helen, what's the longest word in the English language?

Helen Johnson: Smiles, because there is a mile between the first and last letter.

Mother: Get up, Belinda, remember it's the early bird who gets the worm.

Belinda: Let him have them, mother, I'm not hungry.

Miss Fox: Can you tell me the most dangerous part of an automobile?

DeVere Cripps: Yes, it's the driver.

Sigurd Johnson: In Texas they never hang a man with a wooden leg.

Al S.: And why not?

Al S.: Because they use a rope.

Watch for the coming date—October 17!!! The Powers Trio.

Fern Denno, Elma Canfield, Junior Leslie, Forrest Annis and Clyde Borders were neither absent nor tardy this week.

The nurse was with us last Friday, we are sorry that more of the mothers could not be present.

We have re-enrolled in the Junior Red Cross.

Calla Brott was absent from school Tuesday afternoon.

John has a vanity case, no wonder he has a "peaches and cream" complexion.

Elmira Heath—Teacher.

Send that this be purchased for use in our publication. The Editor in Chief then decided whether or not to purchase so much to pay and how the transaction was to be handled. If he didn't like the editor's choice—well I just wouldn't like to be the editor on days like that.

But now it is getting cooler, and the precious dollars that have been saved are going to be used immediately. I am going to see everything that is of interest in and around New York—Coney Island, The Hippodrome, Ellis Island, the opera, Atlantic City, and of course all of the best theatres. In fact, I am going to do exactly what anyone else would do if they were going to be in New York at this time.

Saturday I am going to Coney Island, and the week following I have a front row seat for The Follies. No details will be omitted, so look for these in an early issue.

DEV. BUREAU ANNUAL MEETING OCT. 28

Plans are under way for the annual meeting of The Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau and East Michigan Tourist Association in joint session in Bay City, opening Tuesday, October 28th. Prospects are that this meeting, the first to be held in the fall season will have practically full attendance. Heretofore the annual meeting has been held in January. Winter storms proved a handicap to travel and at the last annual meeting it was decided to hold the coming session in October. Whether the meeting will conclude with a single day's session has not been fully determined. The combining of the Bureau association with that of the Tourists association has opened the question whether or not it may require two days. The annual dinner in the evening is being planned for as a big feature at the conclusion of the business routine.

Fifty-one firms and individuals have contributed information concerning real estate in a new edition of the real estate folder issued by The Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau which is now being printed and will soon be ready for distribution. Thirteen counties are represented. The directory is intended as a direct and immediate answer to inquiries concerning real estate in northeastern Michigan, saving delay and taking quick advantage of interest in the growth of the northeastern counties.

Northeastern Michigan will receive large benefit from a full page advertisement placed in national magazines with circulation of more than 100,000 copies, by the Kuhlman Electric Company of Bay City. Half of the page is devoted to six excellent photos of summer scenes in northeastern counties. The title of the page is, "Where the Summer Trail Begins." The advertisement invites travelers to visit the company's office "while on your vacation trip in Northeastern Michigan."

Early indications point to a record for The Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau and East Michigan Tourist Association to be held in Bay City opening Tuesday, October 28th. The change of the month of the meeting from January to October, when the weather is more agreeable, is believed to have opened the way for a larger attendance. Preparations for the event are going on satisfactorily.

MICHIGAN UNDER FIRE

AT GRAYLING OPERA HOUSE TUESDAY OCTOBER 14.

Grayling will have its first opportunity to see its own boys and the boys of the rest of the state under fire Tuesday night, October 14th in "Michigan Under Fire" to be given at the Grayling opera house, under auspices of Grayling Post 106 American Legion.

You will see them actually going over the top, advancing under shell and machine gun fire and sometimes falling wounded—finally bombing and capturing the German strongholds. Every bit of action is authentic, taken by Signal Corps photographers, and vouched for by the Government.

The story is complete from the scenes in training camp, at Camp Custer, to the home-coming of the Yanks.

Interest in the film is increased because the audience looking upon pictures of Michigan boys pressing toward the enemy lines and fighting demons, gaining the honored title at the close of the war of "Les Terribles" and winning the insignia of the red arrow because that emblem signified the terrific central drive into the very heart of the German army.

As many of the various fighting units are shown, ex-service men will probably recognize many of their "buddies" and may see themselves.

See where the 32nd division won for itself the name, "Les Terribles," during the world war at the Grayling Opera House, next Tuesday night, Oct. 14th, in "Michigan Under Fire," which will be given under the auspices of Grayling Post No. 106 American Legion.

Matinee 3:00 p. m.—Prices, children 10 cents; adults 25 cents. Evening, usual hour—Prices 25 and 35 cents.

MR. MORFIT GOES TO NEW JERSEY

IS GIVEN FAREWELL DINNER BY BOARD OF TRADE.

C. M. Morfit, for nearly eight years the manager of the local DuPont plant has been transferred to the position of maintenance engineer at the Company's Cellulose Products division at Parlin, N. J. and will leave to take his new position Thursday night. In the mean time John Bebb will have charge of the local plant which will be under direction of C. T. Clark, manager of the Bay City plant.

Mr. Morfit came to Grayling Feb. 17, 1917 to assume the management of the local plant, his family following soon thereafter. During the nearly eight years he has taken an active part in those things that make for better community progress and has been a valuable counselor and worker in the Board of Trade. He was never backward about accepting responsibilities which he discharged with thoroughness and competency. Only those who have been most actively identified in the Board of Trade service can fully appreciate the valuable aid Mr. Morfit has given in the work of that organization.

At the banquet that was tendered Mr. Morfit by the Board of Trade members at Shoppenagon Inn Tuesday noon the high esteem in which he is held and the full appreciation of his splendid aid and his comradeship was freely expressed. And one speaker in summing up his remarks said, "Mr. Morfit is a splendid Christian gentleman." Unlike the servant with the single talent, instead of burying it to save it and losing all, he used his many talents to the great benefit of his community and his fellow men.

Responding to the many nice things said about him, Mr. Morfit said, "I'm blue. No use denying the fact that when a person has lived many years in a community and is forced to leave home, it brings sad regrets." Before coming to Grayling, Mr. Morfit said, he had always been traveling around from one department of the du Ponts to another. This is the first place he had remained long enough to become at home and he had never regretted the time he took when he accepted the position in Grayling. Here he had home, friendship, good fellowship and associates. He hoped that in the future he would be privileged to come to Grayling often. He was happy in the knowledge that he may have been a useful citizen while here.

President M. A. Bates presided at the meeting. Other speakers were Holger F. Peterson, Rev. Baughn and R. Hanson. Schram's orchestra furnished music during the banquet.

Mr. Morfit is a gentleman of genuine worth and refinement. His friendship is of the kind that lasts and is not wadded about with every wind that blows. He has a deep understanding of life's generalities and is generous in his consideration of others. We are sorry indeed to lose Mr. Morfit, but he leaves with the best wishes of many warm friends. Mrs. Morfit and the children will not leave at this time but expect to join Mr. Morfit in a couple of months.

CLAIM LAWYER KILLED INSANE

Quarters Bodies of Victims, Cast Heads in Concrete.

Geneva, Ill.—Warren J. Lincoln, horticulturist, and lawyer, has confessed to sawing and quartering the bodies of his wife and brother-in-law butcher fashion, and casting the heads of his victims in blocks of concrete. He is represented by his counselors as a hopeless idiot.

The defense has employed a corps of five alienists, among whom will be Dr. H. S. Hulbert, one of the Leopold-Loeb psychiatrists, who will battle to show that the defendant is insane, that he is suffering from dementia praecox, and that he therefore is not legally responsible "for the most atrocious deed in the annals of Kane county," for which the prosecution hopes to send him to the gallows.

The defendant, in his cell, protests his sanity to all who will listen, as he discusses the case calmly and with apparent unconcern.

SEEK TO DISFRANCHISE NEGRO

Citizenship of Race Attacked in Suit On Customs Collector.

New Orleans—A suit attacking the validity of the fourteenth amendment from a new angle has been filed in federal district court here in the form of a petition seeking to enjoin Walter L. Cohen, Negro, collector of customs of the port of New Orleans, from exercising the duties of that office, according to the Times-Picayune. The action, if successful, would have the effect of disenfranchising every Negro in the United States.

The petition, as published by the newspaper, charges that Cohen "falsely alleged himself to be a citizen of the United States" when he took the oath to office. It asserts that the defendant is not a citizen of this country, but is "a person of African blood and descent and is inherently incapable of being a citizen of the United States."

MASONS AND K. OF C. ORGANIZE LEAGUE

TOLERATION IN ECONOMICS, POLITICS AND RELIGION CREED OF BODY.

ELIHU ROOT BECOMES MEMBER

Hamilton-Jefferson Association Is Non-Secret, Non-Sectarian and Non-Partisan.

Utica, N. Y.—With a view to fostering patriotic ideals and "a spirit of toleration in economics, politics and religion," 50 Protestants, nearly all members of the Masonic order, and a like number of Catholics, the majority affiliated with the Knights of Columbus, met for formal organization of the Hamilton-Jefferson association, announced as a "non-secret, non-sectarian and non-partisan" group.

The charter members of the association, all leading business men of Utica, heard the aims and objects of the organization outlined by leaders in each of the two fraternal bodies, and summed up in the principal address of the evening by Elihu Root, formerly United States secretary of state, and a resident of Clinton, near here.

Mr. Root, who became a member of the association only after he had been assured of its non-sectarian character, expressed the belief that by having a membership drawn equally from the Protestant and Catholic faiths, the organization had gone a long way toward ultimate success.

PRINCE CHARMING

SYNOPSIS—Ellen and Joe Latimer, orphans, without means, make their home with their Aunt Elsie, at Port Washington, near New York town. Ellen is studying art, her expenses being paid by Mrs. Sewall Rose, girlhood friend of her mother. Mrs. Rose invites Ellen to a Thanksgiving house party and the girls are delighted. On the way from the station to Mrs. Rose's Ellen rides with a remarkably attractive young woman and a much older man. She takes them for father and daughter, but they are introduced as Mr. and Mrs. Josselyn.

CHAPTER III—Continued

Ellen would have recognized him instantly from the picture. His head, bare in the sunshine, was silver, and the lean, clever face she remembered was clear olive in coloring, and brightened now with a most winning and kindly smile. Ellen's first rather awed impression was of polite reserve, self-confidence. Authority spoke in the pleasant voice, and every inch of the man was stamped to her young vision with a fineness, an aristocracy, a something that marked him superior to others.

In the midst of the first jumble of explanations from the newcomers, as to their reasons for leaving Great Barrington, and their first details of the trip, Mrs. Rose distressedly interrupted.

"Gibbs—Gibbs, my dear boy," stammered she, holding his hand in both her fat ones, and fixing upon him a look all imploring and conciliatory. "You know your father is here, dear—I wouldn't have had it happen for anything in the whole world—but he and Lillian got in on Wednesday, and he telephoned me at once to come down and lunch with them—I really do feel terrible about it."

Gibbs Josselyn had flushed up to the silver crest, but he smiled upon her not unkindly.

"Dad's here, eh?"

"Yes, Gibbs—and Lillian!"

"Gosh, that is awkward!" ejaculated Ward Rose, with a sharp, anxious look at his guest.

"Not awkward a bit," Josselyn said quickly. "Of course you had to have them. I'm glad you did—but of course I won't meet her. I'll be getting right along, and see you soon—"

"Listen, Gibbs—she's really quite nice!" Mrs. Rose said eagerly. "Do—do be reasonable about it! Your father—your father isn't going to have any more children, Gibbs, and you simply—"

"Gibbs is the best judge of what he wants to do, my dear!" her husband interrupted nervously, with a hint of disapproval in his tone. "I wouldn't—I think I wouldn't try to force matters, Abby. We're awfully sorry, my dear boy, but you understand—of course I had no idea—"

Mrs. Rose looked despair.

"But, you've not had breakfast, Gibbs! Lucia will be wild if I let you go—coming eighty miles a morning like this—"

"But I can get breakfast!" he said impatiently, as if he found the situation insufferable.

Ellen had been a rather embarrassed witness to this scene, her sympathetic eyes going from one face to another. Now her hostess suddenly noticed her.

"My dear child—all this time—where's the housewife?" she exclaimed nervously. "What time have you, Ward—Miss Latimer must catch the eleven-thirty!"

"She has exactly eleven minutes," Gibbs Josselyn said dryly, glancing at his watch, and the older man added surprisedly: "What on earth's the matter with Maurice? Why is everything topsy-turvy, Abby?"

Ellen Would Have Recognized Him Instantly From the Picture.

"Goodby, both of you—see you soon!" Gibbs said suddenly. "Run down and jump into my car, Miss Latimer. I'll run you to the train. We'll make it very nicely. Goodby, Ward!"

"Oh, now, I don't like this one bit!" Mrs. Rose continued to protest, but she kissed Ellen goodby none the less, and her husband ran with the two young persons down the steps, tucked Ellen's bag into the back of the car, and forced her to slip into his big fur coat for the two-mile trip.

"Leave it in the office some day, Gibbs," he said. "You can make it, I guess! Goodby, Miss—Awfully sorry, old boy, but such things will occur. Abby's all upset about it, I know."

Young Josselyn put Ellen into the car, and tucked the heavy robe snugly about her. In another ten seconds he had sprung into his own seat, and waved a goodby to the watching Roses. The roaring of the car drowned out all farewells.

A day or two ago Ellen might have felt it her place to keep the conversation moving. But the last forty-eight hours had been full of painful lessons for her; she knew better now than to attempt any friendly overtures. Boys younger than she had snubbed her, girls of seventeen had looked upon her askance. So she kept absolutely silent, her bright eyes moving between the fur of her hat and the fur of her collar like those of a timid but interested bird.

As the car was brought neatly against the station platform, she began to free herself from her wrappings, and said politely:

"I'm a thousand times obliged to you, Mr. Josselyn!"

"I don't know whether you are or not," he said, narrowing his eyes at her quizzically. "I think we've missed it!"

"Missed it! Oh, goodness!" Ellen echoed in dismay.

"Stay where you are," he said, jumping from his seat. "I'll find out."

He crossed the station platform and disappeared, and Ellen sat in a panic, waiting for him. Oh, she couldn't go back to that house, and have the whole thing begin over again—

"Yes, ma'am, we've missed it," said Gibbs Josselyn, coming back, and leaning against the car with sympathetic eyes on her face. "Was it pretty important, or what? The next is at one-twenty-two."

"It's not so important," Ellen said, in a troubled voice. "But I don't like to go back—I'll wait here!"

"What—until after one o'clock!"

"Yes, I think so," Ellen answered firmly. "I—I don't know them very well," she went on confusedly. "And—and I think I rather worry Mrs. Rose, not getting on exactly with the others."

She stopped, conscious that this explanation was rather lame, and added finally: "You see, they all know each other so well, and they don't know me!"

"I see perfectly," Gibbs said pleasantly. "You would be safer in a band of Hottentots!"

Ellen laughed. Her white night had only added a touch of mystery, of spirituality, to her Irish beauty, after all, and the drive, after her breakfast, had brought back her wild-rose color. The man looked at her as if he saw her for the first time, looked down at his big fur glove, plunged his hand suddenly into it, and asked carelessly:

"You couldn't make the run with me, I suppose? I'm going straight down to my club. I won't take us more than a couple of hours."

The girl's big eyes danced. The thought of a refusal never entered her head:

"Oh, I'd love it!" she answered happily.

"Good girl!" he said. He walked about his car, eyeing it from all sides, opened the engine-hood and made a few mysterious investigations, got back in his place, and they were off. Her companion, who was wearing dark goggles, turned to Ellen and dropped another pair of glasses in her lap, with the four brief words: "Better put them on."

Ellen obediently snapped them against her soft hair. Not another word was spoken for three miles. Ellen was entirely conscious that the man beside her was gradually working off his irritation and anger.

After awhile he glanced at her, smiled a sudden and perfunctory smile, and said:

"I'm pleasant company for you—what? Have you minded my chatter?"

Ellen laughed, in some embarrassment. "I didn't mind—not talking!" she said, shyly.

"You—what?" he asked in so loud a voice that she felt rather frightened. "You didn't mind? Well, that's so much gained, anyway. He drove on for a minute or two, and then asked abruptly: "Miss Latimer, how much of that did you get?"

Ellen was not quite sure she understood him.

"You mean—there at the house?" she faltered, as he gave her a shrewd side glance.

"Exactly!"

"I knew that Mr. — that your father was there!" the girl said, timidly.

Gibbs wrenched at the wheel with large, strong hands; his brow clouded; they flew along in silence.

"D—n such women!" she heard him say under his breath. Ellen felt her color rise, she looked straight ahead. "I wonder if she arranged that!"

Ellen's quick look met his; she shook her head decidedly.

"Mrs. Rose? Oh, no! She wouldn't do a thing like that! She was frightfully nervous the instant she saw you," she answered confidently. "She's too good-hearted—she wouldn't do a thing like that!"

Again he did not answer, except for

Distilled Wisdom in Aged Irish Proverbs

"The proverbs of a nation are the distilled wit of generations of its people, and the true wit of the race is oftentimes in proportion to the truth and beauty of its proverbs," says Seumas MacManus, who points out, according to the Montreal Herald, that the sayings of the Irish are singularly rich in poetry, philosophy, satire and wisdom.

"The silent mouth is melodious," is an Irish proverb of poetic beauty.

"Our eyes should be blind in the shade of another," and "If the best man's thoughts were written on his forehead, he would wear his hat down over his eyes," inculcate charity in judging others.

"God never shuts one door, but He opens two," and "Hope is the physician of every misery," express the optimism of the race.

"Fierceness is often hidden under a dubious glance and a half-satisfied nod. But after a while he spoke.

"I guess you're right. You probably are. I guess I'm just out of sorts—making too much of the whole thing!"

The car slowed down, Gibbs looked at the fastening on one of his big gloves, shot Ellen a glance.

"Have you got a mother?"

"No," Ellen answered. "My mother is dead."

"So is mine," he said soberly. "I loved her very much. I don't—I don't get used to it!"

"I'm sorry!" the girl said, simply, after a moment.

For a few minutes he was silent. Then he suddenly began to speak of his mother.

"I don't know why," he said unexpectedly, "but I wish you had known my mother. She was a most extraordinary person. She was frail always. I think, and when I was a boy about eighteen or nineteen, she had an illness, and she never left her couch after that—for twelve years. I was studying in Paris, she and my father had left me there; she wanted me to be a painter. But on my own responsibility I came home when my father wrote me that she was ill. I've never forgotten her look when I came into the garden. It was summer, and she was lying on the porch—thin, and so white—"

Ellen hardly dared breathe. She had never had a man's confidence before. "I gave up my painting, and I went into the firm with my father," he pursued. "A year ago, we were both in the library with her, when she—well, she just gave a sort of sigh, that was all. Her heart got tired, there was no pain. And for a while we thought my father was going, too. He drooped and brooded—it was ghastly. He'd always been so young for his age. But now he seemed broken, somehow!"

Ellen cast about for something to say, chafing of chilling his mood.

"He seems young now," she ventured at last.

"Now? Of course, he does!" Gibbs assented half-angrily. "Mind you," he added, speaking fast and vigorously, "mind you, he had a perfect right to remarry if he felt like it. That's his affair. But to marry this pink-cheeked, empty-headed, stupid clock model—if she was that! I only saw her once. She was engaged, when my father met her, to a big black-mustached fellow who had a couple of living wives. That's her measure! The fellows began to hint to me about it six months ago; I didn't believe it. Then I saw my father with her one night, having dinner at Sherry's. I think it was I thought—"

"Well, you're only a kid," he said, more gently. "But I never dreamed this would come of it!"

"Ellen's color rose.

"But—but there is nothing disgraceful in his marrying her," she said bravely. "And—if I were your mother, I would rather he did that than—than did anything that wasn't fair to her!"

Gibbs drooped on in silence. She thought perhaps he had not been listening.

"You're quite right, my dear," he said presently, in a softened tone. "You make me feel ashamed of myself. A good woman has the trick of putting her finger right on the vital spot sometimes, and I believe my mother would agree with you!"

Ellen's happy color flooded her sensitive face.

"I've not seen my father since this thing happened, two months ago. I suppose they told you that?" Gibbs said. "I've not been home since. I suppose he's established her there, if they got in on Wednesday, and she's prowling among my mother's books and lace and jewelry. I can't—I can't quite do it. The world's big enough, and people will stop buzzing about us beauty." "There is often anger in a laugh," and "A good dress often hides a deceiver," are other ways of expressing the idea that appearances are sometimes deceiving.

"A man with one eye is a king among blind men." "Without treasure, without friends," and "A heavy purse makes a light heart," show the advantages of possession.

"Look before you leap," and "Don't take the thatch off your own house to buy slates for another man's," are good advice to the improvident.

"Enough is as good as a feast," preaches a sermon on contentment.

Best Bird of Africa

The loudest voiced bird is undoubtedly the bell-bird or companion of South America and Africa. This feathered songster gives forth a loud, clear note almost exactly like the tolling of a bell. The companion, which is a white bird, about the size of a pigeon has on its head a horny growth, and this, connected with the roof of the bird's mouth, is the cause of the peculiar note.

QUEEN BEES BRING ROYAL RETURNS

"IT PAYS to specialize" when you are engaged in the art of apiculture. Bee keeping, always a specialized business, reaches its most highly specialized and most lucrative form in the raising of queen bees.

But the work of raising queen bees is difficult, and there are many failures, admits a girl specialist in the industry.

"The girl who decides to undertake the raising of queen bees had best consider it, for a time, at least, as a side-line to the business of general bee keeping," says this queen of the queen bees. "She can realize profits off her honey, in that way, while she is learning to manage her queens."

The market of the specialist in queen-bee raising is formed by the general beekeepers of the country. The most readily sold queens are bred from the notable sweet-tempered golden-colored Italian stock.

The first step of the commercial queen bee raiser is to remove the established queen from one of the colonies. Next, she should remove some young eggs from another colony and place them, by means of a tiny metal spoon, into wax cups, or "queen cells," similar to the ones queen larvae naturally have, set the cups in a frame, and place the frame in the midst of the first colony. She can make these cups herself, or she can procure them from a good bee supply house.

The bees which have been deprived of their first queen set up a hum of joy at the discovery of the new queen egg, and immediately set to work to provide it lavishly with the special "royal jelly," which means that a queen will emerge in about sixteen days. Since a queen bee is jealous of her rights, and will fight to the death with any other queen that may hatch, the keeper must enclose each cell in a separate compartment, so that each queen will hatch in a little cage by herself.

When a queen bee is hatched, the keeper must remove her to a "mating box," five inches square and four inches deep, containing a couple of small frames of honey-filled comb. The keeper pours in with her about a cupful of bees and with them the queen bee sets up a temporary home. After preliminary short excursions which assure her that she can find her way home, the queen makes her "wedding flight," from which she returns mated for life. Soon she begins to lay—and then the keeper knows that she is successfully mated, that she will produce half a million eggs in the three or four years of her life, and that she is, therefore, ready for shipment.

THE "FLOWER GIRL"

A "FLOWER GIRL" is not always an adjunct to a wedding ceremony. Often she is just some energetic girl who has turned her fancy for flowers into financial success. Fads and fancies do not always bring returns; but a flair for flowers, if rightly directed, does.

A "flower girl" I ran across the other day became provoked when I used the word "art" in connection with her work, because, she said, "It's all a matter of business." Later on, she admitted that she did indulge her "artistic tendencies" a bit as she worked in her garden, though she sternly repressed them when she marketed her wares.

True garden-craft is market-craft. The stumpling block of most country and small town girls in selling flowers is their proneness to set limitations for themselves. A girl is sometimes satisfied to carry a little basket of flowers into the city each day, when she could be shipping out hundreds of dollars' worth of flowers daily during the season.

One step such a girl may profitably take is the making of an arrangement with the hotel proprietor to provide his tables with flowers at a fixed sum per month. The proprietor may agree to display her fresh-cut flowers every morning where people will see and buy them, too.

Furnishing flowers for the town cemetery may be another opportunity for her. She may put up flowers for funerals, too. She should solicit this trade herself, pointing out that flowers received from the city are not always fresh and attractive, as hers would be.

A "birthday book," in which is listed birthday and other anniversaries of as many women as possible, is a help. The flower girl who keeps a book may call the woman's husband to remind him of the event, and to suggest that he "say it with flowers."

Of course, there is something else to the flower business than simply going to the right places to sell them. One must have a snappy product, and that requires in this case, an artistic instinct. Even in business, one can't "say it with flowers" unless she understands their language, which is, after all, an artistic one.

Now, caring for a flower garden is essentially a work for which many women are eminently suited.

You must be both an artist and a business woman, then, if you are ambitious to succeed as a "flower girl."

Girls Fly Fortune Kites

On the flat housetops of Morocco girls may often be seen flying kites, which they believe will give an augury of their future. If the kite remains unbroken good fortune in a happy marriage and handsome husband is in store for them; if it mishap befall the kite evil days will be their portion, says the Detroit News. So much faith do the girls put in this test that if the kite is broken they are depressed for many days to come and consider it a very bad omen.

And Then She Tried Treatment and Found Relief From Her Own Troubles.

"One day I asked a man, whose picture and testimonial I saw in the paper, if Tanlac really helped him. He said, 'Tanlac saved my life,' so I lost no time buying Tanlac and the results are, I have gained 9 lbs. and enjoy splendid health. I now know for myself that 'Tanlac is wonderful.'"

"Now, Tommy, give me one definition of prose." "People who get paid for playing golf," was the answer which proved enigmatic to the teacher.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"A Blessing to Suffering Women," Writes One

Louisville, Illinois.—"I certainly thank you for the great benefit I have received from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I first learned about it from my step-mother who got so much help from it. Several years ago I took it for inward weakness and since then I have taken it during the change of life and it has been a great help to me. It certainly is a blessing to suffering women and I take pleasure in recommending it. My health has been better this summer than it has been for five years. I am now able to do all my work and have gained 240 pounds of fruit and vegetables this summer."—Mrs. KATE McPEAK, Louisville, Illinois.

Wants Letter Used As Proof
Frankford, Pennsylvania.—"I am sure if women who suffer through the change of life as I have, with hot flashes, nervousness and other weaknesses, would give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial they would be benefited as I was. My nerves were so bad that every little noise made me jump, but now I am not bothered that way at all. My husband says he really hated to look at me. I looked so miserable. I hope you will use this letter as proof of the help the Vegetable Compound is giving me."—Mrs. ARBIE HARVEY, 5701 Leonard St., Frankford, Pa.

The Silent Motorcycle

The noise and vibration of the motorcycle are two features which have worked somewhat to the detriment of this mode of travel. But these objectionable features seem to have been overcome by a motorcycle design which has been recently shown in England. The noise is eliminated by entirely enclosing the engine of the transmission and several new features are introduced to overcome the vibration. As a test recently, a motorcycle of the new design and a standard automobile were driven toward an observer on the roadside. The latter heard the automobile at 134 yards, but the motorcycle approached within 70 yards before its noise was noticed.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best—Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself as like an endless chain system, the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says, "For example, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcel post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

"I heard he was out of work."

"He is."

"Then how can he maintain an expensive automobile?"

"That, my boy, is a secret which baffles master minds. Many of us apparently no longer need fairy godmothers."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Forced To Remain in Bed

Carlisle, Illinois.—"During the Change of Life I suffered with severe nervousness and with disturbances of the entire system. These continued probably two years before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I could do none of my work and was not always able to be up. For ten days at a time I was forced to remain in bed with my hips propped higher than my head and the pains were terrible. The doctor helped some but each time I was forced to go over the same suffering. I had taken the Vegetable Compound in 1910 after my twins were born and it had helped me so I decided to try it again. I became better and gained strength. I have taken it for about three years now but not steadily. I am able to do my housework but I avoid all heavy lifting and washing and ironing as I know I am not strong enough yet. I give the Vegetable Compound to my daughters and recommend it to my friends."—Mrs. LOUISA B. BRAND, 450 Fairfax Street, Carlyle, Illinois.

In a recent country-wide canvass of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, over 100,000 replies were received and 98 out of every 100 reported they had been benefited by its use. For sale by druggists everywhere.

NOVEL THREE-WHEELED MACHINE OF 1900

This is the latest addition to the Smithsonian institution, Washington, the Knox three-wheeler of 1900. It is one of the earliest commercial motor vehicles and is of a style known as a "trap." The gas engine is a one-cylinder, air-cooled. The power application is controlled by the lever at the driver's left. In 1900 this machine was driven in a parade at the Hudson-Fulton celebration in New York city and was awarded $25 for the oldest machine to complete the line of march under its own power. Paul E. Garber of the Smithsonian staff is shown in the machine.

NEGLECT CAUSES MANY ACCIDENTS

Car Is Equipped With Set of Brakes and Ill Treatment Destroys Them.

(By ERWIN GREER, President Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago.)

"If only you ignorant mortals could understand motor talk," grunted a tiny voice, "what harrowing tales of torture you would hear."

"But some of us do," I gasped, peering down to locate the hidden voice which seemed to come from within the brake band of the car by which I was standing. "I've studied it conscientiously for ten years."

"Then for the love of deprecation, listen—and carry my message to the world. I'm all worn out and ready to fall apart."

Brake Worn Out.

I can't repeat that pitiful tale. It's moral is listed in the newspapers every day under the head of "Accidents." It was only too true that the poor brake was worn out just as he said, for the next day I came across it and the rest of the car piled against a tree at the foot of a hill. The driver escaped, as is usual with a fool. He intends to buy another car—with good brakes this time. He told me so himself. Do you know him? His name is Legion.

Now! What do you know about the brakes on your car? Is their action so positive that they will stop the car almost instantly? Will they hold in an emergency? You say: "Yes, of course, they did it just the other day." But would you be willing to bet that they would do it again?

Are you one of those who trust in luck and the devil to take care of you, and eventually, "bust" into a telephone pole? If you are one of these kind of drivers, you better put this copy of my article carefully away to read again later. You will appreciate the story much more then—provided St. Peter hasn't given you a harp in the meanwhile.

Ill Treatment Destroys.

Every car is equipped with a good set of brakes and neglect and ill treatment are the only things that destroy them. That word "neglect" should be erased from every motorist's dictionary for it is the cause of 100 per cent of all motor accidents.

Brakes must be given the most critical attention, and that, frequently. Test them! Watch out that the linings are not wearing too fast. Make this inspection two or three times a week. You, the driver, is the one who pays the penalty if anything goes wrong on the road.

Stuck in Deep Mud

When the car is stuck in deep mud and the wheels cannot get any purchase, try wrapping the tire chains bodily around the tire and rim of the wheel, so that they make a big bunch and then fasten them with a strap or some wire. Turn on low gear, slowly and carefully and generally the wheels will get grip enough to pull the car out.

Do Not Employ Heat to Straighten Steel

If through some mishap some of the steel parts of the chassis, such as the rear axle tubes or front axle, become bent, do not use heat to straighten them, because these parts are all carefully heat treated, and if heated for straightening they are likely to have the effects of their accurate heat treatment nullified. This will result in materially weakening the parts so that they are apt to be incapable of withstanding the strains put upon them.

The best way is to straighten such parts cold, but if the bends are too great this cannot be done. In extreme cases of this kind the best thing to do is to ship the affected part or parts to the factory for straightening.

Resetting a Magneto

In resetting the magneto the coupling often may be placed so as to cause the magneto shaft to be out of alignment. The best method is to note the condition of the coupling before being removed, which is done by slipping the thumb and forefinger around it.

The periphery should be perfectly smooth, and one side should not be higher than the other. In resetting the coupling clean it well and see that the outer surfaces of the parts are in line.

Loosening Hub Caps

Hub caps won't always come off merely by wrench persuasion, even when considerable manual effort is also used. If the cap is so tight that you cannot budge it by your own efforts, bring the jack into the matter. Use a fairly long-handled wrench and place the jack under the end of the handle. A few strokes of the jack will get the best of the stubborn hub cap.

Care of Magneto

While the magneto does not require much attention other than an occasional oiling, in accordance with the instructions of the maker, it is a good plan to remove the breaker box and distributor covers to clean these members. A small, soft brush, will be of service. This should be done at intervals, especially if the magneto is exposed to dust, etc.

Drive Wheels Locked

It sometimes happens that the drive wheels of the car are locked because of breakage in the differential or universal, so that it is impossible even to haul the car home. In these circumstances it is best to remove the keys that hold the rear wheels to the axles. This allows the rear axles to turn freely and the car may be towed in without further difficulty.

Automobile Hints

The railroad crossing is no place to put on a non-stop run.

In these days, motorists who drive like 60 are getting 60.

Automobile drivers once argued over miles per gallon but now it is miles per hour.

Test for Gasoline Should Be Tried Out

Know how to test the gasoline you purchase?

The next time you drive up to a filling station, take out a piece of white paper, and get the man to put a few drops of his product on it.

Wait two or three minutes for the gas to evaporate.

If, then, you cannot see where the "gas" was put, fill up.

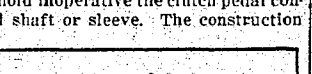

If you can see a grease spot, drive on.

This comes from a man who makes gasoline and has known it all his life.

Prevent Car Operation by Unauthorized Person

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing an automobile lock, the invention of E. C. Lamson of Jefferson, Ohio, says:

The invention relates to a simple means for preventing the operation of an automobile by an unauthorized person through the combination of parts with locking means in such a manner as to hold inoperative the clutch pedal control shaft or sleeve. The construction

A Perspective View, With Casing Partly Broken Away to Show Details.

Is such that either clutch or service brakes may be locked independently or at the same time, and thus prevents the car from being pushed or dragged away. The device may be used in many forms, and positioned in any convenient place on the car, it is applicable to practically any type of car manufactured.

SPOT'S VISIT

Spot was a little white dog with shaggy white hair and a little pink nose.

He was a cousin of Snowball, another dog who belonged to a cousin of Spot's mistress.

Snowball was white and shaggy and little and a great pet.

Whenever Spot's mistress went to visit her cousin, Spot went along, too. It was quite a little journey by train, but he was never left at home.

He had a special basket in which he traveled, and his mistress carried the basket.

When he arrived he always had a beautiful time. He played with Snowball, he played with the different members of the family, he sat up on his hind legs and "begged" prettily for good things to eat.

He looked now at the new rabbits which had arrived since they had last been here.

There were six of them, and they were very white and soft and fluffy, and their little noses were pink.

The last time he had been here there had been six or seven cunning little turtles. They had been amusing.

He looked now at the new rabbits.

But he was told now that the turtles had gone to sleep in their mud beds for the winter.

Spot couldn't imagine a mud bed being very nice. He always had a nice soft bed with a big cushion on it. But then the turtles were funny, anyway.

He had thought the way they lived in their shell homes all the time was most strange and they had spent their time in the water when he had been here last and had not bothered to explain why they did this.

Perhaps they had, but then they talked turtle talk, and he only knew dog's talk and people's talk.

He could understand all that the people said.

Well, he had a beautiful visit and enjoyed himself immensely, but when it was time to go home he went and sniffed at his basket, for he had heard his mistress asking what time the train left, and he knew that meant that they would be starting pretty soon.

He went and crawled inside his basket, as though to say:

"Here I am, all ready to start. Why should there be any more delay?"

But they told him that they were not quite ready to start, and to come out again.

So he came out once more and sat on his hind legs as though to say:

"Please let's start now."

Then he thought perhaps that was not very polite, so he wagged his tail as though to say to these cousins:

"We had a charming time. Thanks so much for having us. Delicious food, pleasant society, a charming time."

But after awhile it was really time to get ready and Spot got in his basket and with one paw waving a goodbye and his tail wagging his thanks, they were off.

Down at the station it was raining, so he went inside the waiting room with his mistress and sat up in her lap.

Then the train came along and she told him to get in his basket which was down on the floor.

He bounded down and into the basket and the people all around smiled at such a smart little dog.

And then they started for home in the train.

It wasn't a very long trip, and some might have left their little dog at home, but his mistress didn't.

No, he went traveling, too. He liked to go where his mistress did, and he enjoyed visiting and good "company" food.

But when he turned around three times and then curled himself into a comfortable position upon his home pillow that night he said to himself:

"But home is the best and the most comfortable of all."

Plenty

"Oh, mamma!" exclaimed little Charles, as he rushed into the house. "There are 200 dogs in our back yard."

"Are you sure there are that many?" asked his mother.

"Well," said Charles, "there is our dog and another one, anyway."—Detroit News.

His Memory Was Bad

Little Johnny had been sent to the bakery to buy a coconut cake, but when he arrived at the bakery the word "coconut" had completely slipped his memory.

"Please, lady, my mother wants a two-layer noodle cake," he said.

Treasure Trove in Hen

Three emeralds and four 22-carat caratage shells were found in a hen which Mrs. Betty Shullow bought, live-weight, in the market at Minneapolis. The stones were extremely valuable.

How the Motor Industry Set the Pace for Highway Building

The "horseless carriage" of yesterday is now being produced as the modern automobile at the rate of 4,000,000 a year. The total number of motor vehicles registered in the United States is over 16,000,000.

And automobiles built today are more than ever capable of economically serving both business and recreation needs.

But there is an obstacle standing in the way of their maximum service to owners.

For while the automobile industry made paved highways an economic necessity, the mileage of such roads is today years behind the requirements of modern traffic.

Happily motorists everywhere are boosting for more and wider paved highways.

And extensive experience has taught them that Concrete Highways are one of the best all-around investments they can make—an investment that pays big dividends.

As one of our 16,000,000 motorists you know better than anyone else the need for more and wider Concrete Roads. Start now to help your local officials provide them.

Work is progressing finely on the new church and the brick work is practically finished except the tower which is going along well. Mr. Litchfield of the Litchfield Construction Company says that all material for the work is now on the ground. The roof is nearly all roughed in and shingling has been started and everything will soon be under cover. Mr. Litchfield says that because of the slow delivery of the stone for the door and window ledges they will not be able to finish the job by December 1st, but however promises that the building will be ready for the Christmas services.

Al. Cramer is at Mercy hospital, recovering from injuries, which he received in some mysterious manner last Saturday night. Just how Mr. Cramer received his injuries is unknown, but he was found at about nine o'clock near his home in a semi-conscious condition by Morris Sutcliffe, who was driving along that street. Mr. Sutcliffe with the aid of some neighbors succeeded in getting Mr. Cramer into his home, and the following noon he was removed to Mercy hospital. After 6 X-rays it was found that the extent of his injuries amounted to two broken ribs, besides his back was badly bruised and he had a bad cut under his chin and several scratches on his face. Mr. Cramer doesn't seem to recall just what happened, but it is thought that he was held up, and that his injuries came about through a tussle with the culprit. However he is recovering and will be able to leave the hospital in a short time.

WHEN INDIAN FISHES ITS WORK, NOT SPORT

Naturally Lazy, He Uses the Sure and Simple Method.

He has three ways of doing it—with a gill-net, with a dip-net, and with a gaff-hook. The familiar hook and line of the white man he scorns as being too slow and entailing too much hard work. What the Indian wants is the fish. He cares nothing about the sport of the thing, nor the thrill of landing a 12-pound beauty with an eight-ounce rod and a slender silk line; leave that to the crazy white man who has nothing else to do. The Indian wants the fish, and the easier he can get them the better he likes it, and the more time he has for sleep.

His favorite way of catching salmon is by the use of the gill-net, since this method leaves him the maximum amount of time for his previously mentioned sleep. A gill-net is a straight piece of netting about twelve feet long and five or six feet wide. One side has wooden floats and the other heavy leaden weights, so it will hang perpendicular in the water. On either end is a stone anchor to keep it stretched out.

Setting the net is an easy process. He chooses an eddy or a deep pool in the river and floats by in his canoe, with the net piled in the stern. When the proper spot is reached, he kicks one of the anchors overboard. This settles to the bottom of the river and pulls the net out over the stern as the canoe floats leisurely on. When all the net is out of the canoe, he kicks the other anchor overboard and his work is done. His labors over for the day, the Indian wends his homeward way and sinks into repose until the morning, leaving the net to catch his meal, says Adventure Magazine.

The water of the Nooksack river is never very clear; usually it is muddy. This makes it hard for the salmon to see, and thereby brings about their undoing. They swim around in the eddies and pools in search of food and, if a net is there, they are sure to run into it head-first. In the course of a day or two, the meshes of the net are quite large enough to let an average-sized salmon through. He gets half-way through, and then tries to back out. As he backs out, the meshes of the net catch under his gills and he stays there till the owner of the net pulls him out.

Next day the Indian comes back in his canoe and pulls the net up, usually finding four or five salmon in it. These he either takes home or hides under a log so he can tell his wife where to find them. With this supply of fish, he betakes himself to rest and does not stir abroad again for a week or so, or until such time as his larder is empty.

Only Campfire Smoke

At the recent state G. A. R. encampment in Frankfort, the annual campfire was the big public event and created much interest. The meeting was held in Howard hall, the Frankfort High school gymnasium.

One woman who lives a short distance from the hall did not attend. Her husband returned home about nine o'clock, while the gathering was still in session, and as he opened the front door, remarked: "I smell smoke, something must be burning."

His wife looked up from the book she was reading. "I've been smelling that," she said. And then a light spread over her face and with all seriousness she said: "Oh, I know. It's the campfire."—Indianapolis News.

How This Fish Walks

As waters inhabited by climbing perch dry up, the existing puddles become overstocked, and the fish leave their old home, says Nature Magazine. They depart by hundreds, traveling over the land, scattering in all directions. Then the gill covers are fully extended and the pectoral fins spread out. The former are bent outward like a joint, the pointed ends seeking a firm hold; by a twisting and turning movement of the body the creature is jerked forward. Then the spines of the gill covers again seek a firm hold. In this way the climbing perch is able to move quite rapidly. If the fish do not find water, they will dig themselves into the mud and can be found at a depth of one and a half feet.

Plant Almost Human

Operating without human control, halting while minor difficulties are adjusted and stopping altogether if something goes seriously wrong, a new electric power station at Searsburg, Vt., embodies astonishing mechanical intelligence, says Popular Science Monthly.

The turbine of the plant drives a generator with a capacity of 6,500 horsepower. The only help from human beings is occasional inspection, lubrication and regulation of the governor mechanism. The turbine starts when sufficient water arrives and shuts down when the flow falls below an efficient limit.

Pulp From Ailanthus

Officials of the United States forest products laboratory, in Madison, Wis., announce the discovery of what is declared to be an excellent and valuable pulp wood from the ailanthus tree, otherwise known as the "Tree of Heaven." Officials, after laboratory tests, say that it developed into a high grade of book paper, also fit for use in the manufacture of lithograph and writing paper. The ailanthus was imported from China into Pennsylvania and New York, where it rapidly is becoming a weed and a menace.

Grim Relics of Fight of Long Centuries Ago

Many indeed have been the revelations of archeology concerning "Unhappy, far-off things and battles long ago." But British explorations at Jerablus—the Carchemish of Jeremiah's prophecy—told a tragic tale with unusual clearness. Some fine limestone blocks projecting from a cutting of the Bagdad railway first aroused scientific curiosity, and excavation quickly showed that they formed the rear wall of a fine, spacious villa.

At no great depth under the surface—the men encountered a thick stratum of burned ashes. There was no trace of later construction, and the site, which was the most commanding in the outer town, would hardly have been left unoccupied while Carchemish was a city; so the excavators assumed that the fire that destroyed the house was that which swept the whole place about 900 B. C. Very soon the assumption received startling confirmation, says the Youth's Companion.

Outside the walls they found a few bronze arrow heads; on the porch there were a number of them, and on the floor of the rooms under the ashes arrow heads of bronze and iron turned up in hundreds, and with them lance points and broken sword blades and men's bones and all the signs of a fierce struggle. Always the weapons lay thick and in front of room doors, and there the arrow heads were often bent or broken, as if from striking against the bronze casing of the door timbers. It needed but little imagination to follow the fight as the defenders were driven back from room to room until they were overwhelmed at the last.

Near by was found a beautiful Greek shield bearing a Medusa's head of the finest workmanship. How came such an object among the ruins of Carchemish, which was destroyed in the same campaign in which Gaza fell? Wise scholars remembered that Herodotus mentions spoils from Gaza, dedicated by Pharaoh Necho at the Temple of Apollo at Branchidae in honor of the Ionian mercenaries who served in his ranks. The excavations at Jerablus have led perhaps to more important results, but to none more dramatic than this, which brings together in one burnt and ruined house at Carchemish two writers so far removed from each other as Herodotus and Jeremiah—the Greek "Father of History" and the Jewish prophet.

Ancient and Modern Culture

To compare ancient Egypt, or the Valley of the Kings, and all they have bequeathed to us, brought to light from time to time by excavation, with material discovery, such as steam, electricity and the like, through other scientific channels would be ridiculous. But archeological discoveries as the harnessing of those powers from uses are the only real advantage other than the science of medicine, that modern civilization may claim over that of the ancients. Again, though we cannot become intimate with those ancient people in the living, by archeological research work we can become intimate with their dead, and the material they have bequeathed us. As a result of such research, we find that culture in the way of intellectual development and the arts in general were in those most ancient times in many ways higher than they are today. In fact, modern progress in the mechanical sciences and industrialism generally are largely responsible for the complete eclipse of spontaneous and unconscious artistic production. If thereby we get such ultimate results as cubism and futurism, then archeological research will show that the arts are best without our mechanical and industrial progress.—Howard Carter in Current History Magazine.

'MA' FERGUSON WINS COURT CASE

Restraining Order Denied. Will Be Gubernatorial Candidate.

Austin, Texas.—Mrs. Miriam "Ma" Ferguson, Democratic nominee for governor, is eligible to become governor of Texas, Judge George Calhoun ruled in district court here, in declining a temporary writ of injunction asked by Charles M. Dixon who sought to restrain Mrs. Ferguson from becoming a candidate in the November elections.

The injunction was sought on the grounds that the constitution of Texas adopted in 1876 did not qualify women to hold office, and the statutes have not given them this right.

Cases decided in Massachusetts New Hampshire, Michigan and other states were brought forth by the plaintiff's counsel, to prove the common law placed the ban of legal disability on women as office holders.

Edge Wins Nomination In N. Y.

Newark, N. J.—United States Senator Walter E. Edge decisively defeated Hamilton F. Kean, national committee man, for the Republican nomination for senator in the recent primaries, leading his opponent by 47,162 votes when returns from 2,173 out of 3,559 election precincts were tabulated. The vote was: Edge, 193,791; Kean, 146,629.

A National Tribute to Nash

7,800 Cars Oversold
Despite Record-breaking Output

Though Nash production is at the highest level ever attained

—still the demand from every section of the country for these new Advanced Six and Special Six models has swept sales to a point so far beyond the best previous mark that unfilled orders total 7,800 cars.

Nothing that we might say could add the weight of a straw to this irrefutable evidence that men and women everywhere do see clearly in these new cars unparalleled excellence and value.

Happily, with increased output unreasonable delay is eliminated for those who act with promptitude in placing orders.

And deliveries will be made on the rotation basis which is fair to all.

In the meantime—October 5th to 12th is national Nash Oversold Week in honor of the extraordinary success of these new models and we are staging a special exhibition.

SPANISH VOGUE IN SHAWLS; WEARABLE TYPES IN COATS

FASHION, this season, is conspicuously a matter of following the Spanish vogue. At every style exhibit, at social gatherings galore, where modish women add to the picture, in cable reports from across seas, in news pages brought by word of mouth by those incoming voyagers who have not left a stone unturned in Paris, London, Vienna and other style centers in their search for "the latest," the present-day modes are discussed and exploited in terms of picturesque Spain. One of the outstanding notes in this overwhelming favor for modes Spanish is the vogue for the deep-fringed, can no longer keep up with her. In stead, he contributes his fleece toward making her a coat all trimmed with braid and fur, and everywhere that Mary goes the coat's along with her. This is an arrangement highly satisfactory to Mary in general, who is just now looking for coats that will do for all-round wear, give good service and be equal to holding their own with different kinds of hats. For Mary has learned to leave it to the hat, more than anything else, when it comes to adapting costume to occasion. Here is one of those accommodating new coats, of a soft and becoming pile graceful, gay-hued shawl. Creators of style who express their genius through knitted stitch, having "caught the vision," are scoring new triumphs in that they are introducing the shawl. These wizards of the knitted art are ensuring the feminine heart with beautiful long-fringed shawl creations which reflect most fascinatingly true Spanish colorings of crimson, black, orange, green and purple. Sometimes the color glory is varied, as in the case of this lovely shawl shown in the fabric, with rich, but sturdy trimmings that will fit in with almost any background. Its plaid lining proclaims comfort and serviceability. Its luxurious collar and cuffs are of Hudson seal and there is a little glint of gold in the silk braid that makes a finishing touch. Probably its owner has a simple plaid frock to match the coat lining and a plain felt hat to complete, with the coat, an ensemble for everyday street wear. But her ostrich-trimmed millinery indicates that a pretty crepe de chine or satin afternoon dress is on its way-somewhere. There are many beautiful and wearable types among the coats that stylists have prepared for this fall. Among the handsomest are coats of chocolate brown velours, with long waist, surplice fastening at the front, which brings two very large, decorated glass buttons a little to the left side. Dyed sarruel makes the ample and long shawl collar and wide cuffs.

A black silk knitted shawl designed in triangular form, with an effective green and blue peacock pattern interknitted in the corner section, is an outcome of the Spanish shawl vogue.

Among the large knitted squares simulating the crepe Spanish shawls, green and beige are successfully introduced in a particularly handsome model, which carries a wide border knitted in fancy stitch, repeating the two colors in the deep fringe.

In climates where there is no very cold weather, the new coats of heavy ottoman silk will be found practical and very chic.

Very new indeed is a red felt hat with the new high crown. The brim turns up in front and a straight feather-fantasy is placed at the right. To carry with this hat there is a large muff of the same feathers that have small hand-painted motifs upon them.

Knitted clothes for sports wear still retain their popularity, and the manufacturers continue to design most attractive models. A straight knitted blouse on the lines of a short tunic has embroidery in Russian colors done in wide bands. There is a smart little hat to match.

FOOD FOR THE FAMILY

To make codfish chowder take an inch slice of salt pork three and one-half inches square, cut into small dice and fry until crisp and brown. Add three sliced onions and stir in the fat until thoroughly heated; add half a dozen sliced potatoes and cover with water. Cook until the vegetables are tender.

In the meantime have soaking a half-pound or more of codfish, shredded; add this with a quart of milk to the rest of the ingredients and when the milk is scalding hot add one-half dozen milk crackers which have been scalded with boiling water. Serve one cracker in each dish of the chowder. Fresh fish may be used just as the salt codfish, cooking it until tender, with the vegetables, then add the milk.

Turkish Soup.—Cook one-fourth of a cupful of rice in three cupfuls of brown soup stock until soft. Cook a bit of bay leaf, two slices of onion, ten peppercorns and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of celery salt with one and one-half cupfuls of strained tomatoes thirty minutes. Combine mixtures, rub through a sieve and bind with two tablespoonfuls of butter and one and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour cooked together. Season with salt and pepper.

Lemon Rice Pudding.—Wash and cook one-third of a cupful of rice in the following: Put into a saucepan the grated rind and juice of a lemon with one-third of a cupful each of sugar and water; when boiling add the rice. Cook until soft. Put the cooked rice with three cupfuls of milk and more sugar if liked into baking dish; add a pinch of salt and bake three hours, allowing it to brown at the last. Serve hot or cold.

Entire Wheat Bread.—Take two cupfuls of graham flour, two of entire wheat flour, two teaspoonfuls of soda, one teaspoonful of salt, two-thirds of a cupful of molasses, one and one-half cupfuls of sour milk. Mix together. Put into a greased bread pan and bake one hour in a slow oven. Nuts may be added, adding to the nutritiveness of the loaf.

Wit consists in knowing the resemblance of things which differ, and the difference of things that are alike.—Madame de Staël.

MORE GOOD THINGS

A most tasty luncheon dish is salmon loaf. Prepare as usual, steam or bake and serve with Spanish sauce.

Strawberry Bavarian Cream.—Soften one package of gelatin in one-half cupful of cold water and dissolve in one-half cupful of strawberry syrup; add one cupful of berries, pressed through a sieve, three-quarters of a cupful of sugar and the juice of half a lemon. Stir until the sugar is dissolved, then chill on ice. When the mixture begins to thicken, fold in one and one-half cupfuls of whipped cream. Mold and serve cold, decorated with chopped pistachio nuts, or use small meringues.

Sour Cream Apple Pudding.—Pare and core enough cooking apples to weigh a pound after paring and coring. Cut into eighths, place in a pudding dish and steam until soft in a closely covered dish. Add two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-half cupful of sugar and mix until smooth. Add three well-beaten eggs, one cupful of sour cream, turn into a saucepan and stir over the fire until the eggs begin slightly to thicken. Remove from the fire, add one-half cupful of rolled and sifted zwiebach crumbs with two teaspoonfuls of vanilla and one teaspoonful of cinnamon. Have ready a well-greased baking-dish, line it with crumbs, turn in the pudding and bake 45 minutes. Serve with hard sauce.

Stuffed Pepper Pickle.—Take twenty small green peppers, one small head of cabbage, two medium-sized onions, one teaspoonful each of ground cinnamon, cloves and mustard, one cupful of salt, a teaspoonful of celery seeds and vinegar to cover. Wash all the vegetables carefully. Cut the tops from the peppers, leaving a bit hanging for a hinge to the cover. Soak over night in salt water after removing the seeds and white pulp. In the morning drain and fill with the stuffing. Chop the cabbage and onions and mix well with the condiments and fill the peppers. Tie the tops on securely, pack in a stone jar and cover with boiling hot vinegar. Keep the jar tightly covered and in six weeks they will be ready to serve.

BEGIN WITH GRANDMOTHER.

One man, when asked how to raise a fine child said: "Begin with the grandmother." I am inclined to think that there is more truth than poetry in what he said. I am certain, anyway, that the way to improve the appearance of potatoes is to begin with the grandmother potato.

I completely changed the appearance of one variety of potatoes in three years by selection of the largest, best shaped and best colored ones for seed.

Up and around Gaylord, and around Elmira, Mancelona, Manton and some other northern towns, they raise many thousands of bushels of certified seed potatoes. A great share of these are shipped away to distant states to be used as seed. You ought to see those certified seed! Big (but not too big), smooth, clean, beautiful things. If you were at the Top O' Michigan Potato show, at Gaylord last year, you saw some of them.

The nice potatoes do not "just happen." There is a reason for that. Every grower of certified potatoes has to have what is called a seed plot. It is on one end of the potato field. He must make it specially rich. He must give it special care. He must dig it, which means that he must go thru the rows and pull out each and every hill that is diseased, and each and every hill whose blossom is off color. The diseased hills have to be carried out of the field so they will not spread disease.

At digging time the seed plot must be dug by hand, one row at a time, and the potatoes saved from those hills that yield six or more large, smooth, properly-shaped potatoes.

The seed so saved is called "hill selected" and is planted next year for all the acreage planted.

Planting hill selected seed greatly increases the yield per acre, and greatly increases the percentage of clean, smooth, well-shaped potatoes.

Why Now?

I am writing about seed potatoes this week because the farmers are now digging potatoes. This is exactly the right time to save next year's seed. It doesn't take long either. There are few machine diggers in Crawford county. Practically all the potatoes in the county are dug by hand. This gives a splendid chance to dig a row at a time, and to toss off to one side, with fork or hook, the hill that yields a large number of clean, smooth, ideal-sized potatoes. Men, pick up these choice ones separately. See that they are put in a place safe from the frost, where the lady of the house will not feed the family all winter out of them.

Will not every farmer who reads these notes please do this way? You will be glad of it next summer. Show that you have the spunk and gumption to take a little pains with some crop.

The County Agent is met all the time with this answer about not only potatoes, but corn, seed oats and the looks of the place, "Yes, I know I should have done it, but I didn't want to bother."

On a farm where a man uses that remark very much things show it, and show it badly. Our careless practices show out in the potatoes that are brought to Grayling to sell. In far too many cases they are a bad looking lot. I don't see how Grayling people stand for some of the potatoes they get from wagon or store.

Sunburned, long, knobby, scabby, bad shaped, not smooth, those potatoes would not get very far if offered at the car door or warehouse door in Elmira, Kalkaska, Cadillac, Gaylord, Vanderbilt, Central Lake, Tustin, Lake City, etc.

It would do some of our farmers good to offer a load at places like the above, and see the number that would be culled out.

Raise 'Em, Sell 'Em.

Too many who would sell produce to Grayling stores and at Grayling houses have not learned the lesson of grading, of keeping poor stuff at home.

I have steadily urged our farmers to increase their income by trying to supply more and more of the stuff that our grocers now ship in from Bay City. I don't think many will say I am wrong in this.

Yet, if our farmers are going to capture the market for supplying Grayling stores and Grayling households the stuff offered by our farmers must be more select; must be better graded; contain fewer culls and seconds, and be given in a neater, more attractive appearance.

Some farmers will resent this. Some will dismiss it forever from their minds and with an angry exclamation.

Too many think that just because they raise a thing that they ought to be able to sell it.

Right now is the season when our farmers seek to sell the winter's supplies to the people of Grayling. Large amounts of apples, squash, cabbage, carrots, beets and potatoes. Only the choicest of these should be offered. Keep your culls at home.

I have seen baskets of potatoes in Grayling half of which I would have fed to the hogs on my own farm—I would not expect a storekeeper or anybody else to buy them. I have, since I lived in Grayling, seen a bushel of apples dumped against the front window of a grocery. Half of these apples never should have left the farm. When the small, wormy, blotched and injured ones were taken out, half the apples were gone. Half of them were fit for cider or hog feed. Yet I suppose the grocer bought the apples of the farmer to accommodate the farmer, and against the grocer's better judgment.

Culls should be kept at home, whether it is cull butter, cull eggs, cull apples, cull potatoes, or cull chickens. Up at the Top O' Michigan Potato show, last fall, a man who had been raising potatoes for at least 35 years, got an awful jolt when the judges, and most of the visitors, passed his exhibit with ill-concealed smiles. He said at the end of the show: "I see my mistake now. I have got to bring better stuff."

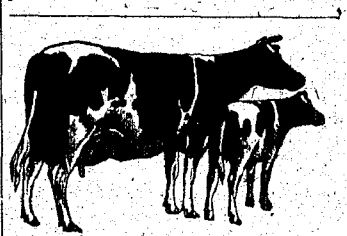

A certain farm woman has brot eggs to town for years; but, the fact that white and brown eggs should not be mixed, and that no soiled egg should ever be offered for sale has never dawned upon her.

This great holler about offering only select stuff is made just now because this is the heavy marketing season for farmers, and I am anxious for the increased prosperity of our farmers.

The means of a greater farm prosperity are right here in Crawford county soil, in Crawford county climate, with Crawford county markets.

Here and there we do see and shall, in the future, see a farm family picking up prosperity right under the noses of some who say that they have got to go to some other place to prosper.

Sigsbee Neighborhood to the Front.

Sigsbee neighborhood is lucky. Mr. John Knecht, after waiting a long time for something that just suited him, has purchased of Hugo Schreiber, Jr., of "The Evergreens," in South Branch township, a choice pure-bred Holstein bull calf, out of that famous sire that Hugo owned and, and one of the best cows on the farm, and there are some good ones at "The Evergreens."

This purchase that goes to "Stony Ridge" farm, is more than the purchase of a mere veal calf. It is the purchase of years of valuable heredity. Congratulations, John.

One By One.

One by one we are getting the county planted with choice dairy sires that are going to revolutionize the farming and the fortunes of our farmers.

It takes a little time, of course. It does not seem long since William Sexton brought into Livingston county, Michigan, the first Holsteins; and oh, how they razed him! Yet for years there has been a steady stream of Holsteins pouring out of Livingston county to every state in the union, and to most foreign countries.

Only last night I read a statement by the secretary of their Holstein association that in the first eight months of this year that county had shipped out 150 car loads of Holsteins amounting to about three hundred fifty thousand dollars.

What better could Crawford county do for her soils and her pocketbooks than to crowd to the front with quality dairy cows that bring in a steady stream of money from butter or better fat, and that would be sought after, far and near by others.

But, it needs men of ideals to accomplish this. This talk of "I don't want to bother" will be a good, powerful brake on the wheels of progress. County Agent Takes Own Medicine.

Nearly two years ago Crawford County Board of supervisors, following the good example of Osego county, and a lot of other counties, voted to have the cattle tested for tuberculosis by State and Federal men, and without cost to the farmer.

We had to wait in line; but, our turn is nearly here. They plan to test in Osego county in October; Crawford county in November; Kalkaska county in December.

They are at it in Osego county. Four of the choicest heifers, just fresh on my farm at Gaylord, have been found to be reactors (have tuberculosis).

I have not killed, and no one shall hear me kick, though it is an awful jolt to have these four heifers go. I am glad they were found out. I don't want to pass tuberculosis to our family and other families from these heifers.

A man's heart isn't right if he objects to the test. The test does not hurt the cow in any way. If she does not react (is found not to have tuberculosis), the owner is not harmed. If she does react (is found to have it) a man must have a soul about the size of a mustard seed if he objects.

The Board of supervisors of both Osego and Crawford counties are to be congratulated for their progressiveness in making the test possible.

GETTING UP NIGHTS

Tells You There is Danger Ahead. A Healthy bladder does not act at night.

J. H. Dorton, W. Graham, a says: "I had to get up seven or eight times at night for forty years. I thought it was my age. After taking Lithiated Buchu a short time, I am all right." Lithiated Buchu cleanses the bladder as Epsom Salts do the bowels, thereby relieving irritation, driving out foreign matter and neutralizing excessive acids. These are the causes of unnatural action of the bladder at night. Lithiated Buchu (Keller Formula) is not a cheap medicine. The tablets cost 2 cents each. Sold at all leading drug stores or Keller Laboratory, Mechanicsburg, Ohio. A. M. Lewis, Druggist.

Save Your Car

THE batteries and starting motor of your car are the headquarters of its emotional system. A heavy engine wears out the batteries, just as it would wear out your patience and your strength should you try to turn it over with a crank.

It is not so far-fetched as it may seem, to compare engine mechanism with human mechanism. Every one who drives has remarked the individuality and responsiveness, or lack of it, in the car he handles.

Red Crown Gasoline increases engine responsiveness. It vaporizes at a low temperature and burns completely to the end of the piston stroke.

It relieves the strain on your starting motor and batteries. This is one of the many economy features in Red Crown. Red Crown makes batteries last longer and give better service.

The "satisfaction" service of Red Crown lies in your thrill at the ready response when you touch the starting motor—at the flexibility of your engine and the steady flow of sustained pulling power.

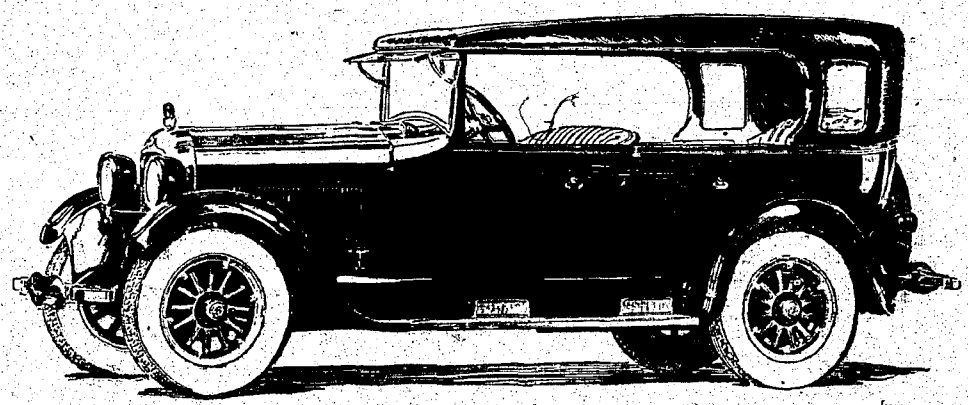

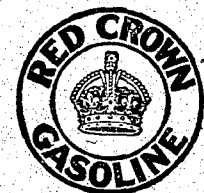

Satisfaction Plus Economy—in this unusual combination lies the true reason for Red Crown popularity. And remember this: permanent satisfaction in a gasoline lies in never changing. Use Red Crown all the time. It's easy to do so, for Red Crown distribution is nearly 100% perfect. You can find it everywhere and everywhere the same.

THE new Studebaker Duplex models give the comfort and protection of a closed car—with all the advantages of an open car, plus the good looks, riding comfort, interior finish and fittings that no open car could ever give!

Yet the price is no higher than that of an open car.

The appeal of its simplicity, convenience and durability is instant and decisive—with a touch of the hand you draw down the four roller enclosures and in thirty seconds your airy open car is a snug, comfortable enclosed car. With equal ease the enclosing enclosures can be rolled up into the roof and you have an open car again.

The Duplex body is especially built for the roller side enclosures, the roof is framed and shaped in steel—permanently beautiful and steel-strong to support the rollers, and the upper part of the Duplex is integral with the lower part. It is a unit body which harmonizes perfectly in beauty and function.

There is no other body like it on any other car at any price—because it is exclusively a Studebaker creation, made only by Studebaker. You can buy the Duplex from no other maker.

The new Duplex is available for each of the three new Studebaker chassis—the new STANDARD SIX, the SPECIAL SIX and the BIG SIX.

And these three new chassis are the evolution of the famous chassis of the five preceding years. Each year they have been improved and refined.

But this year the new models are climaxed with every tested and proved betterment that experience and science have thus far developed.

They are paramount exemplars of modern automobile design. Simply stated, this means that money cannot buy more modernly perfect automobiles than the new Studebakers—we have the Duplex models ready for your inspection. Come in today!
